

①

* An entrepreneur is surely a person with a creative mind. He creates opportunities from existing situations. He believes in being realistic and efficient. He will aim at the common crowd. His sound will be magnificent enough to present his ideas and his language will surely convince others. At any cost, he will bring out his ideas because he has put his heart into his efforts. And this innovative idea, will finally transform into a business model or enterprise.

9. People generally discourage youth from taking out entrepreneurship as a career. Why?

From ancient times itself, a career or a profession aims at economic stability. A monthly or annual income must enter one's pocket consistently. So careers are opted by elders more than youth themselves. It also shows the status, a youngster achieves in society. The youth must have a white collar job befitting his educational qualification.

An entrepreneur must have the confidence to accept the fact that income is secondary. 'Not for profit' in the beginning must be the motto. The innovative idea is what matters, and then the enterprise. Profit and loss comes along with the success of the idea. The risk factor is high. Even if a young man or woman is ready to accept these truths, the elders of the family and experienced public will not let them do so. For elders, a career must be success-oriented. For youth, the definition to the word 'success' is different now. Success is not money-making - it is 'making a difference in society'. It will include 'dignity of labour'. This entrepreneurship is the only solution to 'unemployment' in the society. because the minds of the youth are fertile for imagination.

(2)

*

Irfan Alam says it is important to dream. At the same time, we should take calculated risks to achieve our dream. How far is this statement true, with regard to Irfan Alam ??

Irfan Alam believed that 'Entrepreneurship' is in his blood. The life of Irfan Alam is a testimony to the fact that when intuitions and intentions come together, great things are sure to happen. Ordinary people are afraid to take risks in life. Such people cannot become entrepreneurs. Irfan had confidence with his ideas. So he tried to make his dreams come true. When the SAMMAAN was in its early years, there was no surety that it would be permanent. But the determination to take risks, in life - made him successful. So WHO ELSE is a model for the youth of India to demonstrate 'ENTREPRENEUR' other than Irfan Alam ??